

A GEOGRAPHIC STUDY ON THE EFFECTS OF COASTAL TOURISM ON SUSTAINABLE DEVELOPMENT: COASTAL TOURISM IN CIDE

Bilgin Unal IBRET

Prof. Dr., Kastamonu University, Faculty of Education

bibret@kastamonu.edu.tr

Duran AYDINOZU

Assoc. Prof. Dr., Kastamonu Üniversitesi, Faculty of Education

daydinozu@kastamonu.edu.tr

Canan TANRISEVER

Asst. Prof. Dr., Kastamonu Üniversitesi, Faculty of Tourism

ctanrisever@kastamonu.edu.tr

ABSTRACT

Cide is a district of Kastamonu in Black Sea Region located in the northwest of Turkey. Cide district, 140 kilometres from Kastamonu, has many values regarding existing tourism potential in terms of sustainable development. The characteristics of Cide should be assessed well. The improvements of infrastructure service and investments will carry Cide to more important place. This situation will make important contributions both Cide and Turkish economy. The natural and cultural beauties of Cide are important both for Turkey and the world. In this study case the characteristics of Cide was explained, than the historical of Cide settlement was mentioned and the coastal tourism potential of Cide district that combines green and blue, hidden between Black Sea green was discussed. All of the geographic details were researched and were reflected to the findings part. In conclusion it was discussed what to do for Cide.

Key Words: Sustainability, Coastal Tourism, Cide, Turkey

Not: Türkçe gönderilen tam metinlerde Türkçe ve İngilizce özetler başlıkları ile birlikte eklenmelidir.